BATTLE OF BURMA ROAD

CHECK TO JAPANESE

COUNTER-attacking amid the Yunnan hills, through which the Burma Road runs to Chungking, Chinese troops have checked Japan's outflanking columns.

The Japanese attack was launched against the wings of the Chinese divisions north-east of Chefang, 22 miles over the border into China, a Chungking communiqué reports. The Chinese struck back with great vigour, one Japanese column, a thousand strong, being wiped out. The Japanese rout was completed by a "crushing blow" at a second column which now retain only half its original strength.

No change is indicated in the situation in Upper Burma, where Chinese forces, north of Mandalay, were known to be endangered by Japanese units which swung north-east from the pursuit of General Alexander's troops in the Chindwin Valley.

Akyab—its aerodrome and other installations demolished before the small British garrison left—has been occupied by small Japanese forces, which probably crossed the mountains and reached the town from the land side.

Nothing is known of the Axis claim that a Japanese force had crossed the Indian frontier west of Paletwa, a small town about 60 miles north of Akyab, and were within 62 miles of Chittagong, the port on the Bay of Bengal. Nor is Tokyo's claim to the capture of Bhamo, the old caravan centre north-west of Lashio, confirmed. United States bombers, swooping over their targets in fierce thunderstorms, have pressed home another attack on the Japanese supply base at Rangoon. In their fifth attack on the port in eight days they started numerous fires, eluded a flight of Japanese night fighters and returned safely to their base.—(Press Association and Reuter.)

FIGHTING IN CHINA

CHUNGKING, Friday. — Fighting has flared up again on fronts where Chinese and Japanese forces have already been at grips for more than four years. Ten thousand Japanese have launched a new drive just north of the Yangtse River, in Central China, while from Berlin comes news of a Japanese push in the north. Heavy fighting is going on at Meinyang, south-west of Hankow, the important Yangtse port captured by the Japanese in 1938 after their drive from Shanghai.

Berlin reports "serious fighting" in the Yellow River provinces of Hopei, Shantung and Honan. The Japanese are said to have "pushed back a Chinese force of about 50,000 men."—(Reuter.)

SOVIET SUCCESSES IN THE NORTH

LUFTWAFFE HARD HIT

MOSCOW, Friday—Soviet Russia has won two of the preparatory rounds—one in the Arctic air and the other on the Karelian border—for the coming spring offensive.

Her bomber and fighter aircraft defending the vital Murmansk base have dealt the Luftwaffe such blows that the German air chiefs have been forced to withdraw many aircraft from forward bases.

On the Finnish front, an offensive entrusted exclusively to German troops was beaten back from Russian territory after fierce night and day battles amid the lakes and hills. Three German battalions, which crossed the border from Finnish-Karelia, after a three-day artillery and mortar preparation, in which they fired 2,000 mines and shells, lost nearly 240 men in one battle. After five days of continuous fighting two other battalions were thrown into the attack, but these two joined the retreat after losing several hundred men. Powerfully reinforced bomber, fighter and reconnaissance units of General Stumpf's air fleet began six weeks ago a determined effort to cut Russia's northern communications.

Major Zhadnov, in Red Star, says that five times 30 to 70 'planes were flung against Murmansk itself, but 39 'planes never made the return journey, and 25 others limped home. Now the Soviet's "Bomber Command" is reaching to the Luftwaffe's withdrawn bases. In 14 heavy raids five German aerodromes have been badly hit. In two days the bombers destroyed 43 German machines, and at all their northern airfields the Germans are feverishly strengthening their anti-aircraft defences.

Further south the air war is becoming fiercer. German radio spoke of a violent air battle near Lake Ilmen in the last twenty-four hours. Fighters escorting bombers "ran into a Soviet fighter formation," but no details were given. On land, Berlin claims a success on the Murmansk front, where "enemy forces were smashed in outflanking attacks." Fierce hand-to-hand fighting was reported between Lake Ilmen and Leningrad.—(Press Association and Reuter.)

Russian attacks with artillery and tank support in the Donetz area, and other day-long Russian attacks in an attempt to cross a river, are reported by German radio.—(Reuter.)

BIGGEST SEA FIGHT SINCE JUTLAND STILL RAGING

13 JAPANESE WARSHIPS SUNK OR DAMAGED

THE great naval battle in the Coral Sea, off the coast of Australia, is still raging unabated after six days. "There is no indication yet of its cessation," said the Navy Department in Washington.

Nine Japanese warships have been sunk and four damaged. Details of the American losses are not yet known, though the communiqué says that "no credence" should be given to Japanese claims.

Washington's announcement followed a report from an advanced Allied base in the South-West Pacific, saying that the Japanese had "suffered their greatest defeat of the Pacific war."

According to this report, seven Japanese destroyers had been sunk, but these may have included the gunboats mentioned in Washington's first communiqué on Thursday night.—(Press Association and Reuter.)

OFFICIAL U.S. STATEMENT

The Navy Department's communiqué, which was received at an early hour this morning, says:—

"SOUTH-WEST PACIFIC.—Naval engagement between our forces and those of the Japanese has been in continuous progress in the general area south of the Bismark, in the Coral Sea, since Monday, May 5, and there is no indication yet of its cessation.

"Japanese losses are believed to be:—

SUNK.—One aircraft carrier, one heavy cruiser, one light cruiser, two destroyers, four gunboats and two transports or cargo vessels.

DAMAGED.—One aircraft carrier, one heavy cruiser, one light cruiser, one seaplane tender and two transports or cargo vessels.

"Details of losses and damage to our forces are not fully known at present; but no credence should be given to claims that have been or may be put out by Tokyo.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."—(Reuter.)

AIRCRAFT ATTACKS

According to a Reuter telegram from Sydney last night, reports from an advanced Allied base say the Japanese fleet has suffered the greatest defeat of the Pacific War in the battle that has been going on for days past. Big Japanese concentrations of shipping were caught by United States dive-bombers, which sank two large aircraft-carriers, at least one cruiser and seven destroyers, and damaged many other ships.

After attacks by waves of dive-bombers one aircraft-carrier rolled over and sank immediately. The second was bombed and attacked with torpedoes, and set on fire from end to end. She then sank, and the Japanese fleet scattered.

[Note—This Sydney report adds seven destroyers to the Japanese losses in the second stage of the battle. Thursday night's United States Navy Department communiqué, dealing with the first phase (on Monday), gave Japanese destroyer losses as two sunk.—Reuter.]

AMERICA PLEASED

An earlier Reuter message stated that the opening shots in the battle were fired on Monday, when seven Japanese warships were sunk by American 'planes near the Solomon Islands for the loss of three United States aircraft. They struck their blow at what appeared to be a large Japanese invasion convoy moving south from the islands, escorted by battleships, aircraft-carriers and cruisers. If the Japanese claims are true, the message stated, the tonnage losses on both sides are now about equal.

Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, said:—"Government officials are much elated over early reports of the great sea battle."

U.S. EXPERTS' VIEW

Associated Press, in a telegram from Washington last night, stated that an authoritative analysis of American reports and Japanese claims arising from the battle in the Coral Sea indicated that the Japanese had suffered heavy losses, which if continued would result in a smashing victory for the Allied sea and air forces, and secure for the time being the north-eastern approaches to Australia.

This view was apparently borne out by the statement of the Allied naval spokesman in Australia giving details of Japanese losses. In the absence of complete official information, however, Washington naval experts refrained from labelling these engagements as a complete success, and cautioned against optimism unwarranted by the facts officially made public to date.

They said also that short of a miracle some American and Allied losses in both surface vessels and aircraft must be expected as the inevitable price.

Some sources believed that the entire action on the Allied side might be developed as an operation of an aircraft carrier, cruiser and destroyer "task force," without battleships participating. Naval authorities commented that it was curious that the Japanese had claimed only large vessels sunk, which would make spectacular propaganda. Therefore, Japanese boasts were widely discounted.—(A.P.).

TOKYO'S CLAIMS

Tokyo claimed to have sunk two American carriers of the Yorktown and Saratoga class, and a battleship of the California class. A heavy Australian cruiser of the Canberra type was stated to have been "seriously crippled," and a British battleship of the Warspite type "heavily damaged."

The British Admiralty, however, stated that there was no truth whatever in the claim that the Warspite or any oter British battleship has been sunk or, damaged in the battle.

A communique issued by Japanese Imperial Headquarters states:—

"Imperial Navy units operating in the New Guinea area discovered and caught a powerful Anglo-American combined fleet on May 6th in the Coral Sea. Attacking them on May 7th, they instantly sank a U.S. battleship of the California type and seriously crippled a British "A" class cruiser of the Canberra type, and heavily damaged a British battleship of the Warspite type.

"They sank to-day a U.S. aircraft carrier of the Saratoga type and another of the Yorktown type. The attack is still being continued. The sea battle will be called the sea battle of the Coral Sea."

VITAL WEEKS AHEAD

"I tell you bluntly that the whole world may very well shake within the next few weeks under the blows which full scale warfare will strike," declared Mr. Curtin, Commonwealth Premier, in a broadcast in Canberra yesterday. "We face vital and perilous weeks fraught with exceedingly important happenings for Australia. Invasion is a menace capable hourly of becoming an actuality.

"I have said in the plainest words that without air and naval support all talk of an offensive from Australia is meaningless, and all talk of an offensive is meaningless unless Australia is held."

Australia was racing against time and still had to take swift giant strides within its own country. The Government was not thinking, acting or working in a defensive frame of mind, but Australia's striking power must have behind it the full strength of the nation. "We may have to strike first in defence and then in offence, but in either event our punch must be loaded with everything Australia has behind it."—(Reuter.)

RED CROSS AID

U.S. REPRESENTATIVES TO VISIT DUBLIN

Substantial assistance in the form of medical and hospital supplies is hoped to flow from the American Red Cross Society to its Irish sister organisation as a result of a visit to Dublin shortly of two American representatives of this world-wide humanitarian organisation.

Last night the Irish Red Cross Society announced that the Hon. Norman Davis, Chairman of the American Red Cross Society, has cabled to Mr. Justice Conor A. Maguire, Chairman of the Irish Red Cross Society, that the American society has accepted the invitation from the society here to send representatives to Ireland to discuss the possibility of giving some assistance in the form of medical and hospital supplies for the use of refugee civilian victims of the war.

Mr. George Allen, formerly Commissioner of the District of Columbia, now in Washington, and Dr. Daniel P. O'Brien, of the Rockefeller Foundation, now in London, will come to Dublin at an early date.

The American Red Cross hopes that as a result of this visit it will be able to send substantial assistance, and sends its best wishes to the Irish society for the success of its humanitarian work.

Mr. Justice Conor A. Maguire has cabled the Hon. Norman Davis that the Irish Red Cross welcomes the promised visit and reciprocates the good wishes of that society.

R.A.F. ATTACKS CONVOY

HITS ON SEVERAL SHIPS

British Hudson aircraft of the Coastal Command made two attacks on a heavily-escorted convoy of 12 supply ships off the Dutch coast on Thursday night. In the first attack, at dusk, several of the ships were hit by bombs. The second attack was made in darkness, some hours later, and another ship was hit. Two aircraft are missing from these operations.

Early yesterday morning a Beaufighter, patrolling the Dutch coast, sighted two of the ships which had been bombed during Thursday night. One of them—a large-sized merchant vessel—had evidently been very seriously damaged, since it had been run up on the beach, probably to prevent it sinking, states the Air Ministry News Service. The other ship—a medium-sized vessel—was still on fire, with her deck almost awash, and was being towed by two tugs.

Two bombers were destroyed in small-scale raids on Britain on Thursday night. According to the Air Ministry communiqué, enemy activity was on a very small scale. The few bombs that were dropped fell at points in South-East England, at one of which some slight damage was caused. No casualties and no further damage have been reported.

One German bomb-carrying fighter was shot down by British fighters off the South Coast of England yesterday. Three persons were killed and eight injured by bombs.

TEN CIGARETTES COST £55

For selling or permitting the sale of a packet of Players cigarettes at one shilling, being 3½d. in excess of the fixed price, John Lynch, licensed trader, Mullingar, was fined £5 by District Justice Beatty yesterday. His assistant, Miss Fitzsimons, who admitted charging one shilling for the packet in question, was fined £50. Mr. J. Wallace, State Solicitor, said that the prosecution was brought under the Emergency Powers Act.

BIG MIDLAND BOG FIRES

Fire brigades, A.R.P. workers, soldiers, Civic Guards and civilians spent Wednesday and Thursday fighting one of the worst bog fires ever experienced in the Midlands. Hundreds of pounds worth of turf, a field of wheat and many trees were destroyed at Ticknevin, Kildare, and the homes of people were threatened. The fire started at the Derries, near Edenderry, and consumed great quantities of old and newly-cut turf.

Another bog fire raged in the Clonbullogue, Offaly, area, where extensive damage was done. At night the skyline was red with the glare of the flames. Over £250 worth of turf belonging to the League of Goodwill, was destroyed in the Derries area.

BELFAST TREASON CHARGE

POLICE FIND IN GARAGE

A CHARGE of treason felony was brought in Belfast yesterday against two young men, Reginald Mettric Thompson (21), of 99 Skegoneil avenue, Belfast, and William Smith (21), of Ashfield Gardens, Belfast. Before Mr J. C. Austin, R.M., they were charged with having on March 10th and other dates intended to levy war against His Majesty, and with having conspired with other evilly disposed persons, now unknown, to promote by force of arms an Irish Republic in Northern Ireland and for that purpose to advance and encourage the activities of an illegal organisation. Thompson was also charged with having had firearms and ammunition under his control.

Mr. E. Warnock, K.C., who prosecuted, said that on March 9th the police found in a garage in which Thompson garaged his employer's car, three boxes, one containing three Webley revolvers, two fully loaded, another revolver, a quantity of ammunition and a hand grenade. A considerable number of documents were found, including two copies of the constitution and governmental programme of an illegal organisation. A loose leaf notebook contained considerable information about the Crown forces, their strength and disposition and a book on street fighting for junior officers. There was literature about a court of inquiry and a list of petrol stations.

On the next day the police found in Thompson's house another revolver and some ammunition. Thompson, in a statement, denied knowledge of the mass of things in the garage, but admitted ownership of the revolver found in the house. He admitted that he was a member of an illegal body.

Mr. Warnock said that Smith was a compositor. In his house the police found a printing machine and a duplicating machine. In the rollers of the latter was the stencil of an article entitled "Exiled" and another headed "Can the Ministers be Irishmen, too?" He produced documents, one headed "Why an Irish Republic," said he might as well admit that the stuff was very damning, and that he only got them to print for them.

District Inspector W. H. Moffett put in an unsigned statement, said to have been made by Smith, in which Smith said that he had learned to speak Irish and attended the Ard-Sgoil in Belfast with Thompson and a man named Crowe. "So far as I knew," the statement said, "we were the only Protestants who went to the Ard-Sgoil. When Crowe brought the Gestetner to my house I assumed that he was a member of an illegal body, and took it to get him out of a hole." In February last he joined the Ulster Union Club, the statement said, at the inaugural meeting. Crowe and Thompson also became members, and the three of them went frequently to Dublin, where they had a lot of friends, and they used to attend an organisation there.

The hearing was adjourned until to-day.

EVACUATION SCHEME

DELIVERY OF IDENTITY CARDS

Identity cards will be delivered by A.R.P. wardens this month to those persons who have been registered in the State-aided classes for evacuation from Dublin City and Dun Laoghaire Borough. If the scheme should be put into operation, persons in the State-aided classes who do not obey the instructions may find difficulty in obtaining free transport to, and free billets in, the reception area.

Intending evacuees are reminded that the persons included in the State-aided classes are, in general, the following members of families whose total incomes do not exceed £300 per annum:—(1) Children of school age (6-14 years) unaccompanied. (2) children under school age. These will have to be accompanied by their mother or other female relative acting as guardian. (3) Expectant mothers.

Those persons who are not included in the State-aided classes will not require identity cards in the event of the Government evacuation scheme being put into operation. Directions for their guidance will, however, be issued later.

The scheme will be put into operation only if and when the Government decides that it is absolutely necessary.

"CRISIS—THIS YEAR"

VICE-PRESIDENT WARNS U.S.

NEW YORK, Friday.—The Axis offensive on the military, sabotage and propaganda fronts, in the United States and Latin America, would reach its peak "sometime during the next few months," declared Mr. Hy. A. Wallace, Vice-President of the United States, in a radio address. "All the fighting men of the united nations will need to summon all their courage. I am convinced that the summer and autumn of 1942 will be the supreme crisis for us all," he told Americans. "Hitler, like a prizefighter who realises that he is on the verge of being knocked-out, is gathering all his remaining forces for one last desperate blow. We may be sure that Hitler and Japan will co-operate to do the unexpected—perhaps an attack by Japan against Alaska and our north-west coast at a time when German transport 'planes will be shuttled across from Dakar to furnish leadership and stiffening to a German uprising in Latin America."

They must, he said, be prepared for the worst kind of fifth column work in Latin America, much of it operating through Governments with which the United States at present is at peace. "When I say this, I recognise that the peoples of both Latin America and the nations which are supporting the agencies through which the fifth columnists work are overwhelmingly on the side of the democracies."—(Reuter.)

Horses Face Shortage of Hay and Oats

BY A SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE.

IRELAND'S racing industry, already threatened by an oat famine, is experiencing ever-increasing difficulty in obtaining another essential in the horse's diet. Hay, once considered dear at £6 a ton, is now selling throughout the country at prices ranging from £10 to £12 10s. a ton.

The compulsory tillage Order and a natural disinclination on the part of those farmers who have voluntarily tilled to return to grass will accentuate the shortage further. First crop hay, used exclusively in racing stables, and scarce even last year, is obtained from fields which were tilled the previous year, and I understand that this summer it will be well-nigh unobtainable. The physical condition of the animals will be impaired as a result.

Hardest hit by this situation will be—as usual—the small man. The trainer with only two or three horses and very little land will have to look to his wealthier brother for assistance. In March last year the Minister for Agriculture, forecasting restrictions in the purchase of oats for bloodstock, racehorses, hunters and other horses kept for pleasure purposes next year, strongly advised owners to grow their own oats. Recently the suggestion has circulated freely that those who did not do so would get none, but many trainers—even the wealthier ones—have been unable to make arrangements for the growing of feeding stuffs for their horses as they live in the city.

The racehorse is not the only one who may go hungry this summer. It will be even more difficult to obtain foodstuffs for the thousands of horses who have been called back to harness following the stoppage of unessential motoring.

TOO DEAR TOBACCO

CANCELLATION OF LICENCES

The cancellation of the tobacco licence of any trader convicted of overcharging for tobacco and cigarettes was urged yesterday by Mr. Arthur L. Agnew, speaking at the annual meeting of the National Union of Wholesale Tobacco Distributors. The Minister for Supplies had the necessary power, and the cancellation of a few licences would be a deterrent to others "tempted to exploit the public during a period of shortage of supplies."

Mr. Agnew, who termed tobacco the "fairy godmother" of the Minister for Finance," expressed the relief of smokers that no new Budget tax had been imposed, and said that any further increase in price would have reduced consumption.

He denied the statement that tobacconists had held supplies in anticipation of a rise in price, saying that the trade recently had faced a definite shortage of three brands of cigarettes. It would be only fair to the public and the trade if the manufacturers of these tobaccos announced in the Press that deliveries were difficult.

Denying the rumours that manufacturers were exporting cigarettes to England, Mr. Agnew paid a tribute to manufacturers, saying that their wonderful foresight had enabled them to keep up supplies. Finally he appealed to the Minister for Supplies to register wholesale tobacconists under licence, and thus ease considerably the apparent shortage by giving a more equitable distribution.

RED SAILS IN THE SUNSET?

Sea fishermen in 1943 may be driven back thirty-five years to the days of sail if kerosene becomes unobtainable, said Mr. J. D. Rush, chairman, at yesterday's meeting in Dublin of the Irish Sea Fisheries Association, Ltd. The amount of fish marketed by the Association had quadrupled in the past three years.

Stating that spare parts were scarce and new engines impossible to buy, he emphasised the need for care being taken of both engines and fishing gear. During 1941—when the amount of fish handled showed an increase of 174,000 stones over 1939—members were able to make a fair return for their work. Twenty-six members had cleared their hire-purchase accounts for boats bought under the Association's scheme.

Fish was marketed to the value of £84,586, compared with £43,452 in 1940 and £21,191 in 1939. Actual sales of fish by the Association during 1941 realised £103,271. Direct handling expenses showed an increase of only £1,524, while general overhead expenses were reduced by £695. The low net profit for 1941—£174, compared with £1,750 for the previous year—was explained by the fact that the advantage derived from co-operative marketing was passed on to the members. £21,000 had been repaid to the Exchequer. The number of shares issued to members was 3,500.

THE BUTTER POSITION

The Irish dairying industry, which now should be swinging into peak production, still is struggling out of its winter inactivity. Poor grass is the main cause of retarding butter production. The position is improving slightly every day, but the increase in production so far achieved has failed to make an impression on a parched market, in which abnormal consumption has rapidly eaten up everything on offer.

In official circles an emphatic denial is given to the suggestion that butter is being withheld by producers or shopkeepers, it being described as "the old tactics of setting the town against the country."

MOPPING UP AT DIEGO SUAREZ

6,000 FRENCH TROOPS IN MADAGASCAR

WHILE British troops mopped up in the Diego Suarez area, a statement from Vichy declared that 6,000 French troops will defend the rest of Madagascar. These forces, it said, are stationed in the interior, where they can utilise "the difficult nature of the country." The jungle-covered central plateau of Madagascar ranges from 3,000 to 5,000 feet above sea level.

In London it is now known that of the British forces which overwhelmed the defenders of the naval base in a 48 hours campaign, one body of the men previously reported missing was found fighting on positions inside the French lines. British casualties are thus less than the 1,000 Mr. Churchill anticipated in his statement to the House of Commons. The men were missed after the first attack on Antsirane, but when the successful night attack was launched they were found not only holding their own, but having taken prisoners.

According to the French statement the French troops all told totalled 6,000, of whom 1,000 were engaged at Diego, but British estimates put their strength in Madagascar at about 15,000, of whom more than half are in the northern part of the island.

The French claim that a landing party from the French sloop Entrecasteaux is holding out in the mountains south of the Diego harbour.

SEVERAL PROPOSALS

Commanders of the British force, acting on Government instructions, made several proposals to the French authorities to avoid bloodshed and in return got their co-operation. These included the pledge that Madagascar would remain French, and after the war would be restored to French sovereignty; a guarantee of repatriation for those who did not wish to co-operate, the restoration of trade with the island, and the offer of every economic benefit accorded French territories which had already opted for the Allies. To these proposals there was no reply.

VICHY, Friday.—The end of the fighting in the Antsirane and Diego Suarez areas does not mean, according to the Agency, that Madagascar has surrendered unconditionally or accepted the terms offered by the British. No official communication has yet reached Vichy about the conditions of surrender now being discussed. Further news is awaited in Vichy, where M. Laval is maintaining permanent contact with his Colonial Secretary and following developments "from hour to hour."

Fighting was reported to be still going on at 7 p.m.—(Reuter.)

TO KILL THE TYRE BLACK MARKET

MINISTER'S NOVEL OFFER

BY A REPORTER.

Very many persons to whom a bicycle is essential cannot obtain tyres or tubes except by paying prices far in excess of those fixed.

Are YOU one of them? If so, you can obtain your requirements at the fixed price, and at the same time aid the Government to kill this growing "black market."

Last night the Minister for Supplies made this novel offer:—If a dealer or other person offers you a tyre or tube at higher than the fixed price, and if you report the facts to the Department with such information as will enable them to prosecute, the Department will undertake to see that you will be provided with the cover and tube at once at the controlled price.

Cautiously the Minister adds:—"This offer will remain open for a limited period only." It is made in the interests of the ordinary citizen, to many of whom a bicycle is essential to his livelihood. Heavy penalties will be imposed on any person found guilty of over-charging.

The fixed prices appear in our advertising columns.

The body of Rose Dunne (50), of Church street, Skerries, was found yesterday floating in the sea at a bathing place near the town. An inquest will be held to-day.

THE WORLD AFTER THE WAR

HOW MR. EDEN SEES IT

A PICTURE of the new world was painted by Mr. Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, in a speech at Edinburgh last night. "We must make sacrifices for peace," he said. "The world after the war will be a still smaller place. There will be no room for isolation, no room for selfish policies or unneighbourly policies.

Mr. Eden described the Madagascar operations as "wholly successful," adding: "Prevention is better than cure. The Japanese, of course, had their eyes on Madagascar. We knew that; the united nations could not take the risk of leaving the island open to them. We, therefore, decided to act and forestall the enemy. Vichy forces in Madagascar received orders to resist, and they obeyed. It was repugnant to us to be forced by them to shed French blood. Operations were not actually begun until a demand for the surrender of Diego Suarez had been rejected by the local Governor. Would any shreds of French sovereignty remain in Indo-China if the Japanese were successful in this war? Do any remain now?

"NEW ORDER DEAD"

"We did not make peace last time. How shall we make it now? First of all, we must make sacrifices for peace. Everything has to be paid for somehow at some time, and the first thing that we have to do is to understand, as we did not understand before, that we have a direct and inescapable responsibility for peace at all times. That is a responsibility which is not ours alone. We share it with the other nations of the world.

"I have not concealed from you the formidable nature of the problems that the future holds. I would not have you believe on that account that I am a pessimist for the post-war period. We have heard much of Hitler's 'Strength through Joy' movement, and we don't think much of that; but I am no advocate of a strength through misery movement. We can find our own happiness in our own way by the dedication of our working lives to the cause for which we have taken up arms—the sanctity of the pledged word and freedom and opportunity for our fellow-men."

BRITAIN'S "VICTORY PLAN"

STATEMENT OF AIR MINISTER

Britain's victory plan is to smash the Luftwaffe—"hammer it out of shape"—and then invade the continent, said Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, at Birmingham. He promised the German Air Force "a terrible summer." "It is idle and mischievous to talk as though there were two schools of thought in this country—the one which wishes to constitute a second front in Europe and the other which was against it. I believe that the Government and people of this country are united in the determination to attack the German armed forces in Europe, but the plans must be well laid, and the time must be carefully chosen." Finally, he urged the public to trust Mr. Churchill "to speak the word for action when the time is ripe, and not a moment later."

"By day and by night, in the air and on the ground, where they are resting squadrons of the German Air Force in Western Europe will be exposed to the unrelenting attacks of the Royal Air Force. This is the battle of Britain the other way round—superior quality, better pilots, better training, better aircraft—we had all that in 1940, but now we have greater numbers as well.

"The initiative was passing from Germany to the United Nations. The time has come when the R.A.F. are beginning to hit back hard, but on a scale which still only foreshadows the force of the Anglo-American bombing effort to come."

GERMAN REPLY

"The hour will come when Russia is no longer the main sphere of action for the Luftwaffe. When that hour strikes let England look out," declared Lieut.-Colonel Gertz, German air expert, replying on the German radio to Sir Archibald Sinclair's statement on R.A.F. activities over Germany.—(Reuter.)

STOCK MARKET REPORTS

DUBLIN EXCHANGE

Markets closed the week with a slightly busier appearance on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday. Local Securities attracted the bulk of attention, and, although price movements were irregular, the tone on balance was favourable.

Guinness Units were fairly busy, and finished a shade harder at 90/6. The Pref. shaded off to 15⅜. A good deal of interest centred in the Railway group. Great Northern issues were again buyers. The Ord. rose to 23, the Pref. to 42, and the Gtd. to 60.

LONDON VERY QUIET

Gilt-edged securities provided the best features in the London Stock markets yesterday, where business was reduced to the barest minimum. After a very hesitant start, Gilt-edged stocks came in for a fair amount of attention, which increased during the day, and, before the close of business, they showed an all-round improvement. War Loan Threes rose 2/6 and Conversion 3 p.c. was up ⅛. British Rails tended downwards and "Canpacs" lost a further ⅛ to 10 11/32. A number of Argentines, however, were firmer.

In the Industrial market, business seemed to be kept in suspense by news from the Pacific, and, where changes occurred, they showed a feeling of uncertainty. Tobaccos were dull, Imperials falling 1/10½ to 6 1/32. Chain Stores also were weak, and both Woolworth and Marks and Spencer sustained further losses. International Nickel improved on the maintenance of the interim dividend, and Beecham's Defd. were supported. Cable and Wireless issues lost a little of their recent strength.

South African Gold Mining Developers rallied sharply in the afternoon. Blyvoors were marked up 1/9 to 29/3, De Beers returned to favour in the Diamond market and rose to 8 3/16. In West Africans, Gold Coast Selection were 1½d. better.

Oil shares drooped, Anglo-Iranian and Burmah each losing 1/3, and Shell 7½d.

The close was steady. Sales totalling 313,000 shares included 618 issues, of which 287 were higher, 152 were lower, and 179 were unchanged.—(Reuter.)

JUMPING DUEL AT SPRING SHOW

CHAMPIONSHIP CUP WON BY MR. J. BAMBER

By Our Reporter.

AS Miss Carmel Gough O'Neill, on South Tipp, came to her third last jump, the crowd round the Spring Show enclosure at Ballsbridge yesterday held their breaths; for little Miss Gough seemed to be heading for a faultless all-round display.

She approached the second-last jump, went over, and the crowd began to cheer. Then the cheer died away to a silence in which the grass could almost be heard growing, only to break out again suddenly and loudly as the gallant pony rose like a bird before the final jump to carry his rider home to victory. The good humour of the crowd was stirred again later by an impromptu race which took place during the rosette-bearing parade at the end of the event.

Grey skies did not discourage attendance generally. Between events the visitors strolled round the flower-lined enclosure, fragrant with the scent of pink and yellow wallflowers. The unsaddling race—in which competitors had to jump into the zareba, unsaddle, and ride home bareback—caused laughter, when one entrant gave a right-angled, unrehearsed exhibition of Cossack "stunt" riding. There was also a clever duck-driving display by champion sheep-dogs, who did not cause a single feather to rise in alarm as they took their charges through the difficult routine. The Irish Homespun Society's display of village handicrafts with working demonstrators was the centre of much interest in the Members' Hall.

During the morning the show of cattle, sheep and pigs in the Bloodstock Paddock was well attended. The Civic Guard Band played in the tea gardens during the afternoon.

THE JUMPING

The championship jumping event developed into a duel between the Bamber and Hume Dudgeon families in the enclosure yesterday. On the first round over a stiff test of the normal course, with the addition of two fly fences, Mr. Bamber's Lightfoot and Little Eva, ridden by Mr. Jack Bamber, had faultless rounds, while Major Dudgeon's Sea Point, ridden by himself, and Clavenstown Lass, with his son in the saddle, had one fault each. In the second round Sea Point again had a fault for a change at the single bank. Lightfoot had three for faulting at the stone wall, Clavenstown Lass three at the banks, and Little Eva one error for crossing at the double bank. The opening event of the afternoon was over a special course, consisting of fly fences, and was won in splendid style by the Bamber family, Mr. Jack Bamber riding two faultless rounds on his father's White Patch. Level on the first round was Mr. Joseph McGrath's Chequers, but on the jump-off Chequers faulted at two of the obstacles and incurred four faults. Three others—Claremount, Peter, and Major Hume Dudgeon's Dick—tied with one fault each, and jumped off for 3rd and 4th prizes, Dick being eliminated with one fault more than the other two, who tied with an aggregate of five.

FEIS CEOIL WEEK

With over twelve hundred entries, the Feis Ceoil, which opens on Monday next, promises to be one of the most successful in the long history of the great Irish musical festival. The competitions, as has been the practice now for some years past, will be staged in four halls in Lower Abbey street, with the addition on Wednesday of the Unitarian Church, where the organ classes will be judged. The Plunket Greene Cup for song interpretation is the big event on Monday in the Metropolitan Hall, where, starting at 4 in the afternoon, 56 competitors will appear before the adjudicator, Mr. George Dodds. Other big classes are the Denis O'Sullivan Medal (59), on Tuesday morning; Junior Piano C (69), and do. B (57). The Handel prize has drawn 52 entrants.

To meet the transport difficulties competitions will start at 9.30 in the morning, and, running non-stop, will finish at 9.30 at night.

"WALTZES FROM VIENNA"

The presentation by the Rathmines and Rathgar Musical Society at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, on Monday and throughout next week is being awaited with impatient interest. It is a number of years since this musical romance, built round the lives of Johann Strauss, father and son, was seen in the city and all music lovers are agog to see how the "R. and R." will put over a work that imposes probably the severest test they have faced in their thirty years' existence. Principals and chorus have been putting in a strenuous time at rehearsals, and from what one can gather the show will go with a great flourish. The St. George's Brass Band has been engaged to play, and the string orchestra will supply players for the orchestra, which plays such a prominent part on the stage.

INDUSTRIOUS BLIND

When the accounts for 1941 and the Committee's report were adopted at the annual general meeting of the Richmond National Institution for Industrious Blind at 41 Upper O'Connell street, Dublin, it was decided that, owing to paper shortage, these should not be printed, but be left open to inspection at the Institution by any person interested.

Gratitude was expressed to the organisers of the HolmPatrick and Granard golf competitions, which had raised substantial sums to benefit the blind workers; but it was noted with regret that there was a falling-off in the general subscriptions of £61. The existing Committee, including Mr. R. C. Flanagan, Mr. H. P. Stewart and Mr. James Tallo, who had been co-opted during 1941, was re-elected.

Jail for Exceeding Price Control.—"If prosecutions under the Control of Prices Orders are pressed to conviction, the persons responsible, whether vendors or purchasers, will be sent to jail without the option of a fine," said District Justice Gleeson at Ennis yesterday. He added that in Co. Clare, which included three large urban districts, no prosecutions had yet been instituted.

SIX LEINSTER COUNTIES IN G.A.A. TIES

(By PAT'O.)

Dublin forwards must play up to defeat Longford's smart team at Mullingar; should Ward, Banks and Fitzgerald hit off a good partnership, Dublin's front line will get goals. Kildare snatched a last-minute victory from Offaly at Tullamore last year. They meet again on Kildare territory, and it should be a fast and furious game at Droichead Nua. In 1941 it took 4½ hours of play to decide the Carlow-Wexford game after four meetings. I believe that the Kilkenny venue suits Carlow. Fixtures:—

Parnell Park — Clans v. St. Joseph's (2.30); Geraldines v. Parnells.
Mullingar—Dublin v. Longford (3.45).
Kilkenny—Carlow v. Wexford (3.45).
Droichead Nua—Kildare v. Offaly (3.45).

TOLKA PARK FRACAS

In the Dublin District Court yesterday, before District Justice Lennon, eleven young men were charged with riotous assembly, assault, wounding with intent to cause bodily harm, and attempted murder at Tolka Park football ground on March 22 last.

The further hearing of the case was adjourned until next Wednesday.

Mr. John Corcoran, Staff Surgeon, Mater Hospital, stated that a wound that one man named Kelly had received could have been caused by a bayonet, and could have caused death.

SPARKS FIRE HOUSE

A High Court jury yesterday found in favour of Michael Keane, blacksmith and publican, Garraun, Lisdeen, County Clare, and assessed damages at £600, for which the President of the High Court gave judgment accordingly, with costs, in his action against Clare County Council, for damages for the destruction of his house and contents, the thatched roof of his house having been set alight, he said, by sparks from a traction engine of the County Council as it passed along on June 24 last.

STOLEN RICE CHARGE

JURY FAIL TO AGREE

After two days' hearing, before Judge Shannon, at the Dublin Circuit Criminal Court, the jury failed to agree in the case in which Gerrard Byrne, mechanic, "Locherbie," Crumlin, and James Dempsey, packer, Kildare road, Crumlin, were charged with stealing two sacks of rice value £23 on 19th September last from Messrs. Scribbons, Ltd., Marrowbone lane, where they were employed.

James Dempsey said that on the 19th September last he "clocked out" for lunch at 12.55 or 1 p.m., walked to his mother's house and had lunch there, and returned to the factory about 12 minutes to 2 o'clock. Apart from one occasion when he had been with driver William Redmond on the firm's business he had not been in any of the firm's motor vans that day.

Gerrard Byrne said that on the 19th September, about 12.45, he drove Mr. May and Mr. Grant from the factory to the bank in College Green, returning about 1.20. Mr. Grant sat beside him and he drove straight into the factory, where Mr. Grant got out. He himself went into the fitting shop, got his bicycle and went to dinner, returning at 2 o'clock.

After an hour's absence the jury announced that they failed to agree, and asked that some of the evidence be read. They then retired, and, after a further quarter of an hour, returned and announced that they still failed to agree.

They were discharged and the accused men were allowed out on continuing bail.

Fishing Fleet in Mine Field.—Trawlers fishing off Kilmore Quay, Co. Wexford, on Thursday night, were seriously threatened by mines drifting eastwards. In one boat the winch failed to haul in the trawl, owing to the weight of fish, and the fish had to be hand-picked. Many of the boats scattered until the mines were carried away by the turning tide, while others returned to port with their catches.

MISSIONARY WORK

The link with Ireland in Tanganyika has been broken for the first time since missionary work began there with the retirement of Miss E. Forsythe, who was the speaker at yesterday's annual meeting of the Hibernian Church Missionary Society in the C.M.S. Hall, Dublin.

Miss Forsythe gave an interesting account of missionary work in Africa. Infant mortality had decreased greatly and the medical work had greatly increased.

Lord Farnham, who presided, spoke of the work done by missionaries in stricken areas abroad.

The annual report showed that in spite of restrictions of various kinds the work of the Irish Auxiliary had progressed as usual.

The Rev. W. H. Coulter proposed the adoption of the report.

The Rev. G. J. Rogers, who also spoke, became assistant home secretary of the C.M.S. in 1939, and is now to be candidates' secretary for the society.

The Archbishop of Dublin presided at a meeting of the society in the Graduates' Memorial Hall, Trinity College, at which the Rev. G. J. Rogers also spoke.

IRISH GUILD OF CHURCH

The annual general meeting of the Irish Guild of the Church was held on Wednesday last in the "K Club," 16 South Frederick street, Dublin. Among those present were —The Ven. J. R. Willis, Archdeacon of Ferns (President); Mr. G. Ruth (chairman), Rev. Canon P. Quigley, Miss Latimer, Head Mistress, Diocesan Girls' School; Miss L. Duncan, Principal, St. Mobhi's Preparatory College; Miss Scarlett, and Miss O'Donnell.

In his address, the President stressed the importance of the distinctive contribution that each section of the community can make to the common life of the nation, with particular reference to the part which the Guild might play.

In the course of a general discussion, reference was made to the necessity for proceeding without delay with the re-printing of the Hymn Book for use at Irish Services, as well as to the need for recruiting new members for the choir. After electing the officers and committee for 1942-3, the meeting adjourned.

CLAREMONT INSTITUTION

The decline in the art of oratory and public speaking in Dublin during the last fifty years was mentioned yesterday by Dr. James Ashe at the annual meeting of the Claremont Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, held in the Institution, Ballymun road, Glasnevin.

Giving an account of the history of the society, he told how the National Association and the Juvenile Association had amalgamated in 1851; after having separated for some time.

Mr. R. S. Fowler presided.

The annual report, read by the secretary, Mr. Gick, showed that the income for the year had totalled £1,737, and the year had ended with a credit balance of £11, this being made possible by realising as revenue a grant of £100 from the Mrs. Gainsford charity. The health of the children had been good, and although difficulties had been experienced in obtaining supplies the work of the institution had been carried on satisfactorily.

Those present included the Archbishop of Dublin, Captain R. J. Williamson, Mr. J. E. Geoghegan, and the Rev. W. R. A. Bond.

MOTHERS' UNION

Holy Communion was celebrated yesterday in the Mothers' Union Chapel of Christ Church Cathedral, with members of the Mothers' Union in Ireland, to mark the end of the conference. The Dean of Christ Church, who officiated, was assisted by the Rev. Canon Strong, Rector of Chapelizod. Officials and diocesan secretaries of the Mothers' Union in Ireland were included in the congregation.

What is RETREADING?
Retreading is the rebuilding of tyres, and in the process the old rubber is stripped off, and new rubber equal in thickness to that which is originally on the tyre is built on to the casing. It is an absolutely first-class job, and even in pre-war days was availed of to a very large extent by the discriminating motorists and lorry owners in Eire. Of course motorists all over the world, particularly in the U.S.A., have been having their tyres retreaded for very many years.
Retreading or rebuilding, or what ever term is applied, as long as the work is carried out by experts, is a sound, dependable and first-class job. In times of peace it is a most essential factor in the budget of the private motorist and lorry owner, but in war time it is an absolute national necessity, and we are happy to be able to place at the disposal of the lorry owners, and the motorists who are permitted to run their cars, the experience of our workers and the output of our machinery which has been specially made for the rebuilding of tyres.

ROUND-TRIP CONTRACT

AWARDS TO FOUR SEAMEN

Mr. Justice Hanna, in the High Court, Dublin, yesterday, gave reserved judgment in favour of Achilles Herman, first officer; Joseph Burns, second mate; Istvan Remenyi, radio operator, and Constantine M. Nantos, second engineer of the Finnish ship Vicia, now in Dublin, in their action against the owners of the ship claiming declarations that their discharge in Dublin was illegal, as, they said, they had been brought from the United States of America on a "round-trip" contract, and damages for wrongful dismissal and breach of contract.

Herman was awarded £160, Burns £140, Remenyi £150 and Nantos £130.

Mr. Justice Hanna gave judgment in the whole action for £580 and costs, and declared that each of the four men had a lien on the ship until the damages had been paid. He said that he would not grant a stay of execution unless the men were paid their money. He directed the release of the ship—which was under arrest—on the lodgment in Court of £6,000, the amount of bail that had been fixed by the Master of the High Court.

It was stated that the ship had been sold to Irish Shipping, Ltd., for £85,000.

In the course of his judgment, Mr. Justice Hanna found that the men had been dismissed by the master in breach of their contracts, and without legal compensation or conditions, and that they did not continue on the ship after November 28 last as officers, but merely by the concession of the agents. He said that in addition to arrears of wages they were entitled to compensation for breach of their contracts—namely, the expenses of return to a port in the United States of America, or other suitable port where compensation might reasonably be available.

The master had, said Mr. Justice Hanna, been guilty of a breach of duty, and negligent in not renewing the British shipping warrant. He found that the accrued rights under the seamen's contracts had not been frustrated by any impossibility of performance; that the voyage of the Vicia had not been frustrated by the impossibility of performance, but partly by the negligence of the master and partly by the desire of the agents to save expense. There was no evidence of refusal by the British Ministry of Shipping to grant a ship's warrant.

Adding the sums approximately due still for arrears of wages, he made the awards stated.

HOSPITAL'S CLAIM

The Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Murnaghan, Mr. Justice Geoghegan and Mr. Justice O'Byrne, in the Supreme Court, Dublin, yesterday, reserved judgment in the appeal and the cross-appeal in the action of the Management Committee of Waterford Mental Hospital, which claimed a declaration that a person who had been confined in the hospital had been a criminal lunatic during a specified period, and that the expense of his maintenance during that period was defrayable out of money payable by the Oireachtas.

The Committee appealed from the judgment of the High Court, which stated that they were entitled to present their claim, and appealed on the ground, amongst others, that the trial judge had been wrong in holding that their action was premature; and the Minister for Finance and the Minister for Justice, the defendants, appealed from the judgment, and said that the action should have been dismissed.

Mr. Costello, K.C.; Mr. Lavery, K.C., and Mr. C. F. Matheson (instructed by Messrs. Dorbyn and McCoy) appeared for the Committee; and Mr. Kevin Dixon, K.C., and Mr. Carroll O'Daly (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) for the Ministers.

DIRECTOR'S WILL

The Master of the High Court, Dublin, yesterday directed that a suit concerning the will of Francis Joseph Ahern, company director, late of "Avenleigh," Donovan's road, Cork, should be tried by a judge sitting with a jury.

Michael J. Ormond, Knocknagree, St. Clare's avenue, Cork, executor, claims to have the will established; while Mrs. Margaret Murphy, Ringville, Ringaskiddy, County Cork, Mr. Ahern's sister, is contesting it on the three usual grounds.

ACTIONS SETTLED

These settlements were announced before the President of the High Court, Dublin, yesterday:—

Mrs. Winifred Redmond, Crosthwaite Cottage, Glenageary road, Dun Laoghaire, who was knocked down by a tramcar near Albany avenue, Blackrock, on December 18 last, is to receive £500 and a sum for costs.

Joseph Flanagan, salesman, Rathgar road, Dublin, who was injured in a collision involving a motor-car of Mrs. Agnes Ryan, Burton Hall, Stillorgan, and a cabriolet, in which he was a passenger, at Grafton street, Dublin, on December 27 last, is to be paid £275 and a sum for costs; and Miss Anne C. Duffy, Ranelagh road, Dublin, who was hurt in the same collision, is to get £50 and a sum for costs.

A boy, Gerard Studdert, Kilmurry-McMahon, County Clare, who was injured when a motor-car of Patrick Duggan, licensed hackney owner and commercial traveller, Knockerra, Killimer, County Clare, collided with him while he was cycling at Kilmurry-McMahon on August 10 last, is to be paid £150, without admission of liability, and a sum for costs.

EMERGENCY POWERS (FEEDING STUFFS) ORDER 1942.

The above-mentioned Order, made by the Minister for Agriculture, is supplementary to the Emergency Powers (Feeding Stuffs) Order, 1941, and prohibits manufacturers and vendors of feeding stuffs from bringing on to premises on which feeding stuffs are manufactured or sold (other than premises on which the business of milling oats is carried on) any husks, hulls or shudes, whether alone or mixed with any other article or whether whole or ground, derived from the dehulling of oats. It also prohibits the use, as ingredients in the manufacture of compound feeding stuffs, of any other by-products of oat milling which contain more than twenty per cent. of fibre. The Order requires vendors of such by-products (e.g., oat dust, meal seeds, oat cockle) as feeding stuffs to affix to the outside of, and to insert in, each container a statement giving the trade description of the by-product and the percentage of fibre which it contains.

The Order is being placed on sale, and copies will be purchasable from the Government Publications Sale Office, 3-4 College Street, Dublin, or through any bookseller.

In the Coral Sea

Between the Solomon Islands and the coast of Queensland, to the west of the Fijis, lies the Coral Sea, one of the most romantic spots on the earth's surface. Readers of R. M. Ballantyne will recall the thrill with which they devoured the closely-packed pages of the "Coral Island," and one always has associated the lazy seas of the South-West Pacific with a lotus-eating indolence. A few days ago the traditional calm of the Coral Sea was broken rudely, when what has been described as "possibly the greatest maritime struggle of the present war" began off the north-east coast of Australia. Speaking in the Australian House of Representatives in Canberra yesterday, Mr. Curtin, the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, declared "in grave tones" that the naval and aerial battle proceeding at present in the South-West Pacific was "of crucial importance in the whole conduct of the war"; and there can be no doubt that its outcome, while it will not decide the fate of the war, "will determine immediate tactics to be pursued by ourselves and our common enemy." It seems that on last Monday a clash occurred in the Coral Sea between Japanese naval forces and a fairly strong squadron of British and American ships. Full details are lacking; but, according to an Allied communiqué, issued in Australia, a heavy battle has been raging for several days. This bulletin claims that the Anglo-American forces already have sunk one Japanese aircraft carrier and badly damaged another, which is reported to be a total loss. A heavy cruiser also has been sunk, in addition to two destroyers and at least four gunboats. The Allied losses have not yet been disclosed. The Japanese Imperial Headquarters declare that an American battleship of the California class, an aircraft carrier of the Saratoga class, and another of the Yorktown class have been sunk; that a British "A" class cruiser of the Canberra type has been crippled, and that a British battleship of the Warspite class has been damaged.

It is quite impossible at this stage to discover precisely what has been happening. The British Admiralty announces that there is no truth in Japan's claim that either H.M.S. Warspite or any other British battleship has been sunk or damaged in the Coral Sea; but it is evident that a major sea encounter is taking place, which may have an important bearing on the issue of the war in the Far East. In a national broadcast yesterday, the Australian Premier declared bluntly that "the whole world may very well shake within the next few weeks under the blows which full-scale warfare will strike." Invasion, he added, was "a menace capable hourly of becoming an actuality." Six months ago the people of Australia felt perfectly safe, and the suggestion that the American nation might be in jeopardy would have been laughed to scorn. In the meanwhile many things have happened. Pearl Harbour has been wrecked. Some of Great Britain's mightiest naval units have been sent to the bottom of the sea. Malaya and Singapore have been conquered, and even Burma has fallen into Japanese hands. On sea and in the air Japan has established a local supremacy which has changed the entire aspect of things in the Far East; and, although in the long run, Anglo-American sea-power probably will establish itself again in Pacific waters, the immediate outlook, from the Allied point of view, is not encouraging. An Anglo-American victory in the Coral Sea, undoubtedly, would do much to restore Australian confidence; a Japanese victory would cause grave alarm in the Commonwealth. It must be remembered that, at the moment, the Japanese have a decided advantage over their opponents; but this war is not being fought on a short-term basis, and many shocks will be experienced by everybody concerned before the last shot is fired.

Parliament and People

The present British House of Commons was elected seven years ago. An election is long overdue, but it was agreed at the outset of the war that none should take place for the "duration"; and a form of "party truce," operating at by-elections, has kept the House's constitution very much as it was seven years ago. Party alignments, of course, have ceased to possess any meaning, inasmuch as the conduct of the war is, to all intents and purposes, the only subject of debate, and on that subject all the parties—including the Communists—are at one. Nevertheless, there are signs of strain, as there always are when the same Parliament has been in existence for an unusually long time. Members no longer are blindly uncritical of the Government's handling of affairs, but daily more and more of them insist upon their right to speak their minds. One might expect that the spearhead of this criticism, in a predominantly Conservative House of Commons, would be the Labour Party; but the fact is that many of the foremost critics of the Government are Conservative members, while the 1922 Conservative Committee, that formidable caucus which wields so much political power, is by no means steadfast in its approval of the Government's ways and means. For example, it furnishes the principal opposition to the "Beveridge plan" for the rationing of fuel, and some of its members are among the chief advocates of certain new proposals for the co-ordination of the three fighting Services under a single chief. These symptoms of restiveness have provoked Mr. Churchill's anger more than once; yet discontent within the House cannot be as disturbing to him as discontent outside it. The people's confidence in Mr. Churchill is almost unbounded; probably no other Prime Minister in history has enjoyed so much of it; but similar confidence is not extended to several of his Ministers. The people feel that everything is not as it ought to be. They have watched the course of the war, with its frequent evidence of British lack of preparation; they refuse to believe that the country produces all the war material which it could produce under proper direction; and they have issued a demand on two or three occasions for the removal of some Minister of whom, rightly or wrongly, they have disapproved. Lately they have begun to offer unmistakable signs of their attitude. Within the past fortnight several by-elections have resulted in the success of an independent candidate over the head of the Government's nominee. On every occasion the victorious candidate has professed his allegiance to Mr. Churchill, and has persuaded the electorate that his sole ambition is to stimulate greater energy in the prosecution of the war and to protest against the "yes-man" spirit in Parliament. We have neither the right nor the ability to appreciate the motive of the electorate in this succession of by-elections. That is for Mr. Churchill to appreciate. He is too skilful a politician not to understand what it all means, and there is little doubt that the result will be evident—perhaps, in another reorganisation of his Cabinet—before very much longer.

War-Time Restrictions

Poor people have a habit of complaining that the privations of war-time, as well as the privations of normal "hard times," weigh more heavily upon their shoulders than upon the shoulders of the rich, whether they be idle or industrious. In the main, there is much truth in this assertion, but since the beginning of the war the rich people in Great Britain have been forced to submit to a number of unfamiliar restrictions; those who fall into the appropriate age groups have been conscripted in the normal manner; they all have been issued with ration books, and regulations against "black-marketeering" are so stringent that they cannot add to their stocks with any degree of safety in this way; as the transport problem becomes more and more acute, they are learning to cycle and to walk like everybody else. This week sees two more orders likely to restrict their activities and still further to reduce them to the level of the ordinary people. The first piece of news is a report to the effect that all "luxury" hotels may have to restrict severely the number of hot baths which they can allow to their patrons; henceforward, the idle rich who, tradition has it, are wont to spend several hours of each day in an extremely hot bath, will have to satisfy themselves with cold baths, or with one bath per week, every Saturday night. The other piece of news is an order to the effect that restaurants, cafés and "eating houses" of all varieties in the West End will have to close at midnight from now on. Up to the present these establishments had been in the habit of remaining open until all hours of the night, and the order has been introduced in an attempt to put all "bottle parties," night clubs and similar revels off the menu until after the war. Proprietors of normal hotels and restaurants are anxious to put all establishments which cater for such festivities out of business, as the latter operate largely outside the law, and escape such financial commitments as monopoly value and licence duty; there is little doubt, too, that many of them have been active customers in the "black market." Certain cafés and restaurants in the centre of the city will, of course, remain open all night for the benefit of night workers and travellers.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

"MANY Irish authorities are convinced that the entire system of trade between Ireland and Britain will have to be fundamentally changed," states Mr. Kevin Ozzard, in The Tablet, in the course of a comprehensive review of how the war is affecting Eire. "And that a comprehensive method of barter is the only way by which trade between the two countries can continue at all. . . It is considered inevitable that soon the Irish Government will be forced by circumstances to declare that they can only send over cattle in return for chemical manures, eggs, bacon, rabbits and fish, for Colonial wheat, coal, and raw materials for the factories. If this is done Eire will not only be able to put aside fears of a shortage in her own larder, but will be able materially to increase her exports to Britain."

State Farming

State farming through Government departments and Executive County Committees now covers no less than 350,000 acres in Britain. In Scotland half this acreage is being managed by the Committees, including 10,000 acres of deer forest. Much of both areas consists of holdings taken over where the occupier was lax in cultivating his quota. Under special war-time legislation such farms are taken over by the County Committees so that the food production drive does not suffer unduly. Improvements made during the war will have to be paid for by the dispossessed farmer if he regains his holding after the war.

Music for the Public

One remarkable feat of the war has been the extent to which music listening and music making in Britain have not only survived, but also developed. Last year the Carnegie U.K. Trust made payments in the interest of music amounting to £14,000, almost three times their allocation of 1937, on a scheme under which the most important of the symphony orchestras and the Sadlers Wells Opera Co. were enabled to take their performances to areas they would not normally visit. Good music under this plan has already been brought to 72,000 people at an average cost to the fund of 11½d. a head.

Dr. Temple on Profits

The new Primate's "Socialist" leanings are well known, but Dr. Temple has thrown a cat among the pigeons by his suggestion a few days ago that "in the articles of association in any company there should be a limitation of profits according to various factors, and also a provision that, as soon as the amount paid in interest is equal to the amount originally invested, the principal should be reduced until it has diminished." The Archbishop added: "You would allow people to put their money into a company to double it and no more. I think that would be fair. The Yorkshire Post publishes a leader approving of Dr. Temple's principle with certain safeguards, but the Daily Telegraph is not in favour. Meanwhile some dozens of letters are being published in London and provincial papers with powerful arguments for and against the proposal.

Family Allowances

The publication by Sir Kingsley Wood of the White Paper on family allowances follows at an interval of only three weeks the T.U.C.'s conversion to the need for a national system of such allowances. But, while the White Paper makes no recommendations, it is evident that the Government is not over-enthusiastic about the proposal. The gross cost of an allowance of 5s. a week to every child up to fifteen would be £132 millions a year—big money in terms of pre-war Budgets, but a mere eight or nine days' expenditure during this war. The cost would be appreciably reduced under a contributory scheme, or, if allowances were confined to poorer parents, or if the first or the first two children were excluded, a scheme excluding the two eldest children would cost only £32 million a year. One of the minor problems to which attention is drawn is that of ensuring that the family allowance is spent on the provision of food, clothing and boots, and that it does not find its way into the pockets of parents who appropriate it for themselves.

Sweets Ration

Details of the forthcoming sweets and chocolate rationing, which comes into operation on July 27th, will be announced within the next week or two. Lord Woolton has not yet decided what will be the actual weekly or monthly ration for the public. All that is known at the moment is that children will get a special ration, and that there will be no registration with any particular shop.

Fuel Rationing

The comprehensive new fuel rationing scheme, which Mr. Hugh Dalton declares cannot be delayed, continues to arouse controversy. The present control runs out on the 1st June, so that the scheme must be applied by that date if at all. One of those prominent in the debate in the House was Mr. George Griffiths, M.P. for Hemsworth, who worked for twenty-five years at the coal face. At one election he fought, his opponent was named Collier. "There are two colliers in this election," Mr. Griffiths told his meetings, "but only one who has cut coal."

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Quae Regio?

I had a letter the other day from a friend of mine in Gibraltar, which seems to be rather an exciting place to live in at present.

He tells me that that doughty Trinity man, "Motty" Greene, has turned up again, this time as Chief Justice of Gibraltar. The last time I heard of "Motty" he was in Palestine; but it seems that he was promoted some little time ago, and now he is the biggest legal wig in "Gib."

For the benefit of the uninitiated I must explain that I am referring to the former Mr. M. C. Greene, of His Majesty's Colonial Service, who gained his nickname "Motty" in consequence of his uncanny proficiency at that ancient game in Botany Bay in those far off days before the first Great War. There was another game, which will be remembered by an even older generation of Trinity men, known as "Hurling the Hirondelle"; but, I think, that was before "Motty's" time. Otherwise, I am sure that he also would have excelled at that somewhat esoteric sport, of which, I understand, even the great Mahaffy was a notable exponent!

Sixty Irishmen

But to return to "Motty" Greene. He presided at a Saint Patrick's Day dinner in Gibraltar, at which sixty Irishmen were present. The attendance was limited to that number, as the dinner was held in a local hotel which could accommodate no more. Among those present were the Roman Catholic Bishop of Gibraltar, who is a Tipperary man, and the Anglican Dean of Holy Trinity Cathedral, who is a graduate of Galway, and was one of the original pupils of Sligo Grammar School, none other than my old friend, James Johnston.

If the function had been held some months earlier, it probably would have been attended by J. C. Dowse, the old Monkstown and Irish international footballer, who, I understand, is a general now, and held a high position on the "Rock" until quite recently. For all I know, indeed, he may hold it still; but he was not there on Saint Patrick's Night, and "Motty" was deprived of the company of one of his Trinity contemporaries, with whom, I am sure, he would have swapped some interesting yarns—Chief Justice or no Chief Justice, general or no general!

F.R.C.P.

I was delighted to see the other day that a signal honour had been conferred on that most popular of Irish medical men, Dr. T. Percy C. Kirkpatrick, who has been elected a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians in England. It is not an honorary, but a full Fellowship, which is very rarely granted without the usual examination.

So far as I know, there are only two other Dublin physicians upon whom this honour has been conferred by the Royal College. One is Dr. T. G. Moorhead, Regius Professor of Medicine in Dublin University, who some years ago filled the office of President of the British Medical Association, and the other is Dr. Henry F. Moore, Professor of Medicine in the National University of Ireland.

Dr. Kirkpatrick, who is known throughout the medical profession in Ireland as "Kirk," has been Registrar of the Royal College of Physicians in Ireland for a number of years. He is an exceedingly modest man, who hates publicity of any kind, and I hope that he will forgive me for announcing his election into the august company of the chosen few across the Channel.

Actually, I came across the announcement hidden away in The Times, and I think it only right that Dr. Kirkpatrick's fellow-countrymen should be informed!

'Bus Queue Musicians

It has occurred to me (writes a Correspondent) that a man who is existing on a pittance for doing an honest day's work might well turn his attention to a very profitable source of income by merely learning to play (not too brilliantly) the violin.

I happened to be waiting for a 'bus on the Northern quays yesterday. There was a very small queue, not more than half a dozen people. Suddenly a young man hurried up, looking very fit and well fed. He began to play a jig, but did not trouble to finish the tune; instead he hastily made a collection. Four persons gave him a penny apiece. He quickly disappeared to the next queue. The whole incident lasted half a minute.

I made a rough calculation of this man's turnover. It works out at £16 per day, if he only works an eight hour day. £5,600 per annum for playing the violin to 'bus queues is not so dusty! I am thinking of muscling in on this racket myself!

OBITUARY
MR. P. MULCHRONE

Mr. Patrick Mulchrone, of Mullingar, whose death is announced, was the last male representative of an ancient Meath family, a branch of the Southern Ui Néill. He was born in South Mayo, where the family had been located since the Cromwellian régime. During the years 1882-1912 he served in the Royal Irish Constabulary in Offaly and Westmeath. He leaves four daughters, the youngest of whom is Professor Kathleen Mulchrone, Professor of Early and Mediæval Irish in University College, Galway. Two of his sisters, nuns of the Good Shepherd and Immaculate Heart of Mary Order, celebrated recently at Philadelphia the golden jubilee of their religious profession.

BIBLE SOCIETY

Eloquent testimony to the work of the Hibernian Bible Society in India and Iran was borne by the Rev. W. Graham (India) and the Rev. G. J. Rogers (Iran) at the annual meeting of the society, held in the Dawson Hall, Dublin, on Thursday, the Dean of Killaloe presiding.

The annual report and statement of accounts presented by the Rev. L. L. Sullivan, deputation secretary, stated that the issues for the year ended March were 85,480 Bibles, Testaments and complete books of the Bible. In Ireland £850 11/2 was spent on grants, and £3,500 was forwarded to London in aid of the foreign work of the British and Foreign Bible Society. Both Mr. Graham and Mr. Rogers stressed that, without the help of the society, the work of missions would be very severely hampered.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

Three New Anthologies

By Austin Clarke

A New Anthology of Modern Verse, 1920-1940. Chosen and with an Introduction by C. Day Lewis and L. A. G. Strong. Methuen. 6/-.

This Living Stone, The Grey Walls Anthology of New Poems. Edited with an Introduction by Wrey Gardiner. Grey Walls Press, Billericay, Essex. 5/-.

The Little Book of Modern Verse. Chosen by Anne Ridler. With a Preface by T. S. Eliot. Faber and Faber. 3/6.

THE word "anthology," according to the dictionary, still means a collection of flowers, and, by classical implication, a collection of choice poems. But many of the innumerable anthologies which, in recent years, have tumbled from the English press and rapidly disappeared into obscurity have been ill-considered, unequal and unfair. This has been due to the fact that important work, work which entails much experience and acute judgment, has as often as not been entrusted to amateurs, young poets fresh from college, and even novelists resting from their accustomed labours.

In painting, music and other arts there is preliminary training and some kind of acknowledged authority. But poetry is open for exploitation to anyone who can offer an agreeable proposition to a publisher. The majority of anthologies during recent years have been little more than propaganda for one particular group or another, and, in consequence, have been as remarkable for their omissions as for their inclusions. The hastiness of modern publishing has also added to the dangers which surround unfortunate poets.

Some years ago I found that a short poem of my own, which had been included in an anthology, contained nine mistakes. Most of the mistakes were not even recognisable misprints, but horrors, which suggested illiteracy on my part. When I approached the distinguished prose writer who had compiled the book, I learned that he had merely supplied the list of poems to the publisher.

The publisher was duly sympathetic, but puzzled, as he had received no other complaint from irate poets. He explained that one of the stenographers in his office had been sent to the British Museum to copy out the poems. She was a very careful stenographer, and he suggested brightly that she might have copied out my poem hastily at the end of a long day's work, when she was feeling tired. He was very sorry, indeed!

Widely Representative

Judgment and care in the making of anthologies have not gone unrewarded. An Anthology of Modern Verse, made by Sir Algernon Methuen in 1921, has gone through twenty-six ordinary editions and twenty school editions. It is an excellent selection, with only one fault, and a pardonable one—the inclusion of some indifferent verse by authors who had been published by the firm of Methuen.

A New Anthology of Modern Verse, which has been chosen by Mr. C. Day Lewis and Mr. L. A. G. Strong, is designed as an up-to-date successor to the older book. It is widely representative, and includes poets of every school. It may be welcomed, therefore, as a sign that the day of the narrow propagandist anthology has gone. Ostensibly it was an excellent idea to get two distinguished writers, one of the old and one of the young school, to collaborate. But a necessity of this kind is in itself an extraordinary comment on the present state of English criticism. The preface takes the form of an amicable dialogue between the two editors, and has that self-consciousness which we associate with BBC discussions. At the conclusion of the debate Mr. Strong and Mr. Lewis assure us that they have included nothing which both of them did not like.

Diehard traditionalists will conclude that Mr. Strong's taste has sadly degenerated and Mr. Lewis's rapidly improved. Doctrinaire modernists will arrive at an exactly opposite conclusion. The fairness of this selection, its endeavour to be as representative as possible, is to be admired; but, as in all compromises, something seems to be lost. Perhaps, it may be that spirit of pure enthusiasm which seeks out poetry wherever it is to be found and cares nothing for labels.

Pretentious Pieces

There seems to be too much respect for names in this selection. Why include specimens of the vapid and pretentious pieces which D. H. Lawrence wrote with such ease?

> How beastly the bourgeois is > especially the male of the species—
> Presentable, eminently presentable—
> shall I make you a present of him?
> Isn't he handsome? isn't he healthy?
> Isn't he a fine specimen?

—and so on.

Although both compilers have Irish associations it would, perhaps, be unreasonable to complain that no Irish poets of the younger generation are represented in the anthology. Until we have an anthology of our own, poets who have appeared during the last decade or so must be content to wait in a queue.

Several Irish poets, however, are represented in The Grey Walls Anthology, edited by Mr. Wrey Gardiner. Mr. Gardiner finds it necessary to point out that hardly any of the contributors are known to him personally, and that he has not inquired into their views on politics or other matters. The book represents the work of young writers who are little over twenty. Mr. Gardiner attacks the modern literary style, which, in his opinion, apes the realism of everyday conversation. "Intellectually woolly, its only ideas being derived from the great political movements of the nineteenth century, it can hardly be called modern. Is it then too much to hope that such verse, with its sniggering crudities, is already out of date, which is as much as to say it is bad, for great poetry is never out of date?" Evidently the literary pendulum is beginning to swing back! The selection is extremely unequal, but there are half a dozen very interesting poems in the selection.

A Kind of Primer

A Little Book of Modern Verse is designed as "a kind of primer," an introduction, in fact, to the larger Faber anthology. In his preface, Mr. T. S. Eliot remarks: "Its most obvious, and (I believe) its singular, characteristic is its small size." This is not an ironic statement, and actually the anthology is efficiently planned and well designed. But it is strictly limited to modernist groups, and not all modernist groups are represented in it. Otherwise how can we account for the absence of Richard Aldington, one of the principal pioneers of the movement?

Mr. Eliot takes a gloomy view of poetry to-day. Every age, he thinks, gets the art it deserves, and every age must accept the art it gets. "To arraign a generation of writers is merely bad sociology. The answer is not to insist on the merits of that whole generation—bad sociology is not confuted by bad criticism. The answer is in a more thorough and scientific examination of the state of society." But Mr. Eliot points out that such scientific examination is outside the scope of literary criticism.

Memoirs of Austin Cooper

An Eighteenth Century Antiquary: The Sketches, Notes and Diaries of Austin Cooper (1759-1830). Edited by Liam Price. Dublin: Falconer. 10/6 net.

THIS is a most beautifully turned out book. The paper reminds us of the luxurious days of peace, and the illustrations are most clearly and exactly reproduced. The resulting volume is a remarkable tribute to Dublin printing and bookbinding, and for subject matter of the kind could hardly be bettered.

Austin Cooper belonged to a County Meath family which had come to Ireland in the middle of the seventeenth century. From 1742-1806 various members of the family, including Austin, were clerks in the office of the Irish Treasury. There he developed his antiquarian tastes, and was a member of various groups interested in Irish antiquities, being a contemporary of such men as Colonel Vallancy, Right Hon. W. B. Conyngham, whose library he purchased, and Dr. Ledwich. Some of his drawings and observations have already been published in the Journal of the Kildare Archæological Society, the Dublin Penny Journal and elsewhere, and nothing so printed has been reproduced here.

The 58 plates have been chosen chiefly to represent places which have since suffered considerably through time, and weather, and they often throw new light on architectural problems. The text embodies a description of journeys through Munster, through County Dublin, and in Kildare, Carlow and Drogheda. Modern building has vastly changed the Dublin that Cooper knew, and little now remains of many of the antiquities to which attention is drawn.

Publication of this record was made possible through the will of the antiquarian's great-grandson, Albert Damer Cooper, and the Cooper family have been fortunate in securing an editor of the calibre of Liam Price.

INTRACTABLE

By PATRICK MacDONOGH

I.

THE wanton glories of my love
Are scrolled upon immortal trees,
Where, caught and grassed, she saw above
Gold fruit of the Hesperides.

Ten years the gold fruit burned above
But laughter, slipping through the leaves,
Betrayed the hiding place of love
To brooding gods whom laughter grieves.

Strange silence creeps from tree to tree,—
Lost in a wild world of her own
Shapes of bewildered agony
Enclose her, and she weeps alone!

II.

The incipient godhead in the soul
Craved nourishment and was denied,
The flaming mare led on her foal,
Seven score of moons grew up and died,
But still the sun's encyclical
Gilded gaunt housetops all in vain,
The Unshriven soul refuses all
The healing sacrament of pain,
Refuses all and rears in pride
Against the embattled skies and calls
Forsaken allies to its side,
Mouthing dead faiths, while ruin falls

III.

A sudden froth of blinding gold
Boils over from blue-metal cloud,
And, in the silent trudging crowd,
One takes my wrist in fleshless hold—
I worked your foolish father's shroud
And there's a smaller, nearly done,
Will fit your father's foolish son!

Travels in the Orinoco Valley

I Was a Head-Hunter. By Lewis V. Cummings. London: Harrap. 10/6 net.

MR. CUMMINGS has a story to tell, and he tells it without recourse to any of the literary tricks so fashionable to-day among the cognoscenti of travel literature. This is a fascinating story of life among the South American Indians of the Orinoco Valley, a life cruel and savage, untouched by civilisation, isolated by vast swamps and jungles from almost all contacts with the outside world.

What sets Mr. Cumming's book above the ordinary travel tale is not the adventures which he seems to have come across so frequently and fortuitously, but the fact that he seems to have made a genuine effort to understand the people. Apparently he did not merely explore in order to write his book. He has given us as close a study as his purpose could permit of the curious customs, and the rudimentary attempts at a moral code and social life of these Indians.

Life in Wartime Berlin

Berlin Embassy. By William Russell. London: Michael Joseph. 10/6 net.

IN "Berlin Embassy" Mr. Russell gives us a convincingly unspectacular picture of the German capital in war-time. The author does not confine himself to a narrative of great events. His book is a series of impressions. The people he deals with are mostly ordinary Germans-in-the-street—not all booted, goose-stepping Nazis, nor yet charming, celebrated anti-Nazi professors.

The single incident of the author's Christmas vacation in the Harz Mountains gives a nostalgic backglance to pre-1932 Germany. But it is a Germany realising that its old gemutlich standards can no longer be applied. Fortunately for the quiet tone of his book, Mr. Russell resigned his post at the American Embassy and left Germany before things really opened up.

There Was No Island. By Leonard Handley. London: John Long. 8/6 net.

THIS week's crop of reading could definitely be rated as a "mixed bag"; it contains an anthology of light verse, a book of autobiographical reminiscences, two plays and a novel. I shall begin with the anthology. (Anthologies, by the way, seem to be all the rage this week; elsewhere on the page Mr. Austin Clarke reviews three other anthologies, and all of them, strangely enough, are anthologies of verse.)

On the whole, I am not very fond of anthologies; the trouble is that they all contain precisely the same poems in different order. I have about twelve anthologies of English Poetry littering my bookshelves, and every one of them, without exception, contains Yeats's "Lake Isle of Innisfree"; just as every anthology of light verse which has found its way into my hands contains, in a prominent position, Godley's "Motor Bus." It is not that I object, either to Yeats's lake isle, or to Godley's motor bus; far from it. But the constant repetition of these works is bound to be as injurious to them as it is irksome to the reader.

The only way to criticise an anthology is to criticise the selection and to comment on the omissions; in this case I think much of the light verse of A. P. Herbert and Noel Coward might have been included. True, they are not on the same elevated plane of literature with Mr. E. E. Cummings's "So This is Paris," but they are a great deal funnier, and surely that is the only way of telling whether or not a poem is meet to be included in an anthology of comic verse.

Taken by and large, "The Faber Book of Comic Verse" is not a bad production. It is purely a light-hearted affair, a sort of Week-end Book for those who prefer their curds without whey, or vice versa, as the case may be.

LAJOS BIRO is a foreigner—a Hungarian, I think—who has lived in England for a few months, and, like all foreigners who have done so, he is quite convinced that he understands the British people. He does not.

His play, "Patricia's Seven Houses," presumes to illustrate the reactions of a typical British young woman who inherits seven brothels "somewhere in Europe" from a fabulously wealthy uncle. The whole thing is reminiscent of "Mrs. Warren's Profession," and Patricia's reactions consist, for the most part, of a lot of masterly and thoroughly stage-English banging about. There is a certain quality of restraint about the English which no foreigner ever can hope to understand, much less recapture.

The other play in the book, "School for Slavery," is a frankly propagandist; ostensibly it is a drama of occupied Poland. It is interesting, but unneutral.

In an appendix at the end of the book, a sort of apologetic afterthought, Mr. Biro explains that he has not the English very well, suggesting by implication that perhaps the spiritual content of his plays will atone for their grammatical shortcomings. I thought his English was excellent.

"A TALE OF INTERNMENT" purports to be a simple account of life in a woman's internment camp in Great Britain. A fair damsel, with a smile like an advertisement for some superior brand of toothpaste, and hair like a poster for some ultra-modern variety of shampoo, smiles from the dust-jacket. Her name, let it be said, is Livia Laurent, and her style is all that you would expect it to be.

Of course, it may be all quite genuine. It is possible that a beautiful young woman who looks like everybody's conception of Mata Hari, and happens to be a refugee from Germany, should spend a year of internment, first at Holloway and then on the Isle of Man; it is even possible, if such a woman could exist, that she would write a book like this about her experiences.

It is all as interesting as it is unlikely.

LASTLY, the novel. The title says there was no island. I might add that there was not much of a story either.

This is one of those matrimonial muddles in which everybody elopes with everyone else's husband—or wife, as the case may be—travels all over Europe, and ends up, more or less, where he—or she—started. I object to this sort of thing, not so much on moral grounds as on the grounds that it makes for confusing reading. Mr. Handley, it is obvious, has been places and seen things, or perhaps he has had frequent recourse to "Still Brighter French"; at any rate, each page is gemmed with italicised French commonplaces, which would look twice as well, and mean twice as much, in English.

Orpheus and His Lute

By Patrick Kavanagh

Philharmonic. By Thomas Russell. London: Hutchinson. 7/6 net.

DURING the past few years there has been a notable awakening of interest in symphony music in these islands. We in Ireland are lucky in having in the B.B.C. radio programmes to which we can listen with pleasure. As yet we are only half awake, and there is still a good deal of prejudice against it by those who would prefer to sleep on in the dusty bed of folk music. Modern jazz music, too, is part of the psychology of sleep—like football and racing, the hectic nightmarish dreams of the unaware-of-life. There is also a good deal of pretence among those who think that because they have been up and about a few hours earlier than the rest of us and have got some of the jargon off by heart that this can compensate for the lack of an æsthetic sense. In all the arts the æsthetic impulse is everything. Music will always, however, have a larger public than poetry, for instance; for it has a warm, emotional body to lie about its æsthetic ego. I doubt if there is much real passionate interest in music any more than for any of the other arts. By passionate interest I mean, of course, the willingness to lose money by it.

The Herd Instinct

Many people are puzzled by the large audiences which attend symphony concerts to-day, as compared to a short while ago, when even a small hall could not be filled. This development is not so phenomenal to those of us who are students of human nature. It is largely the herd instinct. The herd has for long run wild in the jungle of ignorance, and is now attacked by that remorse which overtakes crude, silly or cynical materialism; for rare sentimental moments they realise the inadequacy and futility of the vulgar thing and are crazy to overwhelm with affection anything that looks like a god. One should, however, not be too critical of motives; for it is an axiom that any motive that brings men to the good is a good motive.

Mr. Thomas Russell, the author of this little book on music, has been in turn a player in an orchestra and manager of one—the London Philharmonic. He, therefore, writes from the inside, which is a merit; it is also a draw-back, as he is sometimes lost in the petty detail of organisation and the intrigue thereof; he also has fallen into the temptation to tell amusing stories that, however good in themselves, would have been better out. Sometimes we fail to find the clear, strong light of an idea running through his book, though he often has wise and pertinent things to say.

The Conductor

One of the principal bones of musical contention is the relationship of conductor and orchestra. How many conductors are anything more than mere figureheads, waving their arms and doing their best to give the gallery some value for its money. As for having any influence on the music, of interpreting it in the light of some passionate idea, or of any unified drive or slant, not at all. It is the star idea of the films, and more often than not the star is a bit of common mud sent flying in a stunt on the wings of publicity. After the Revolution in Russia they tried out an orchestra without a conductor. This was, perhaps, pushing the democratic idea too far. Anyhow, it wasn't a success.

A young musician to whom I mentioned this business made the brilliant suggestion that a certain conductor should start the orchestra with a pistol shot, as is done on the athletic field, and then sit down and await the finish.

Like many interpreters of creative work, Mr. Russell to some extent has forgotten what is most important of all—the creator. He refers in passing, it is true, to Haydn, Mozart, etc., and patronage in relation to the composer, but in general he is lost in the interests of the performer. We find this false outlook in actors. We in Dublin have dozens of actors' societies and schools of acting and the members of these groups always forget that the most important element in drama is the dramatist.

The Composer

If little is being done for the performers of music, is anything at all being done for the potential composer? If he is a man of any genius and sensibility he is sure to be embittered and his genius ruined by his early battles with political, religious and economic graft. The time to help a man is when his genius is young and optimistic and soft and generous.

Mr. Cyril Connolly in a recent issue of Picture Post has referred to some of us who have become embittered and some who are on the way to bitterness. If a man of talent who is the expression and expresser of his country's soul is embittered the fault lies with the country, not the man. No man worth his salt will "play ball" with either religious or political graft, and so he will be starved out.

What is wanted in this country is not a larger public for the arts, for no matter how extended that public might be it would still be too small and too stupid to support a cultural movement. What is wanted is not more empty praise from blasé businessmen in search of God. What is wanted is that the State should reserve a number of sinecures in the Civil Service for our few artists. To give them pensions, as they do in Finland, might encroach on the preserves of the lads who fired a blunderbuss in the Cause.

Here is a piece of Mr. Russell's advice that might have been written in reply to some "whole-time poets" who wrote in a recent issue of the Irish Times:

> "A musician must be a human being before he is an artist; his art must be the expression of his personal attitude to life. How will he acquire an attitude to life if his whole time is taken up with the problems of technique and the means of expression? No amount of technical brilliance or recondite knowledge will hide the paucity of emotion or intellect in an artist's make-up. How often are we told that the true artist must devote his whole energies to his art, without the realisation that art is the highest expression of mankind and has value only in so far as it is enriched with the blood of life."

Zoo in San Diego

My Life in a Man-Made Jungle. By Belle J. Benchley. London: Faber and Faber. 12/6 net.

MISS BENCHLEY is housekeeper, chief dietician and consulting physician to a family of thousands. Her worries and entertainments are on a large scale. She buys water-melons by the ton, and cod-liver oil in 50-gallon drums. As director of the San Diego Zoo, she is the only woman zoo director in the world, and in the sunny warmth of California her animals lead a healthy, outdoor existence.

If you think that excitement and danger end when an animal is "safely" caged, read the accounts of a deadly rattler at large, or the two baboons on the loose, or of a fight to the death in one of the cages. Miss Benchley's experiences in this woman-ruled jungle make an entertaining and unusual book for all who are interested in animals—and who is not?

SCHOOL MEALS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In his address to the Rotary Club, Dr Collis has given proof of the serious effect of continued undernourishment in children. May I stress the point he makes about the futility of any scheme which does not provide a sufficient amount per head to pay for an adequate meal? The campaign which is being carried on to procure the opening of the Corporation kitchens has, as its primary object, the provision of a meal such as Dr. Collis describes, for all children whose parents, through poverty or other reasons, are unable to provide the meal themselves.

The School Meals Act, now in force, only allows a grant of 1½d. per child, and the meal this provides is supposed to constitute (and usually does) the child's dinner. The Act only applies to the schools whose managers are willing to claim the grant. What we desire is that in all schools it shall be compulsory to supply an adequate meal, cooked at the Corporation kitchens and brought to the schools or nearby halls in containers. This meal should be available to every child, and those whose parents can do so should be enabled to pay all or part of the cost by means of a system of vouchers.

There are answers to all reasonable objections to the scheme, and investigations have proved that the need is urgent and widespread.—Yours, etc.,

KATHLEEN NEILL-WATSON.

Carrickmines, May 5th, 1942.

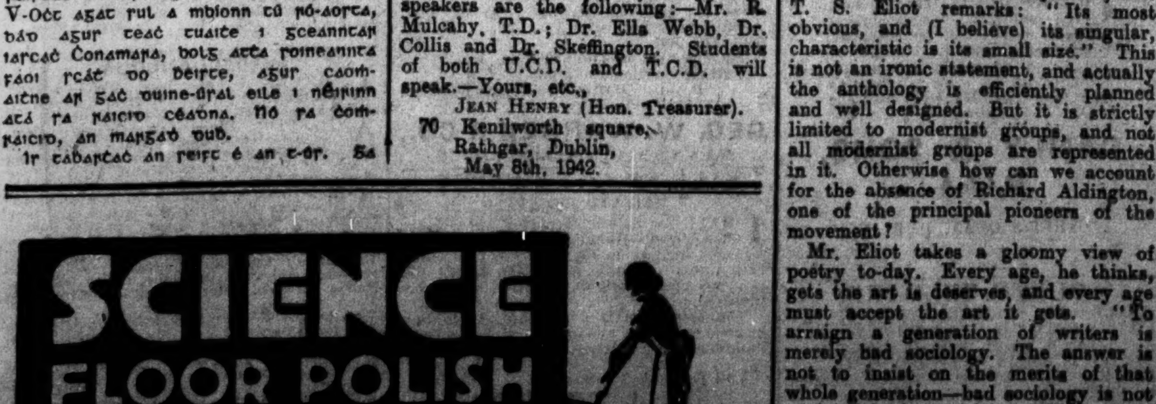

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—On behalf of the students' scheme for hot meals for school children, I wish to invite all those interested in the subject of school meals to attend a meeting in the Graduates' Memorial Building, T.C.D., on Wednesday, May 13th, at 3.0 p.m. At this meeting we will put forward to all interested citizens of Dublin a practical method whereby they may, through the power invested in them as citizens, ensure the provision of hot meals for Dublin school children.

We have invited representatives of all opinions on this subject to speak at this meeting, so that all may be informed of the necessity, advantages and disadvantages of a practical scheme. Dr. K. C. Bailey, F.T.C.D., will take the chair. Among the speakers are the following:—Mr. R. Mulcahy, T.D.; Dr. Ella Webb, Dr. Collis and Dr. Skeffington. Students of both U.C.D. and T.C.D. will speak.—Yours, etc.,

JEAN HENRY (Hon. Treasurer).

TYRES AND TUBES FOR PEDAL BICYCLES

The Minister for Supplies again wishes to direct attention to the maximum prices which have been fixed for the sale of bicycle tyres and tubes, and which appear in the advertisement columns of to-day's newspapers. It is an offence, punishable by heavy penalties, for any person to sell or offer to sell these articles at prices in excess of those which have been fixed.

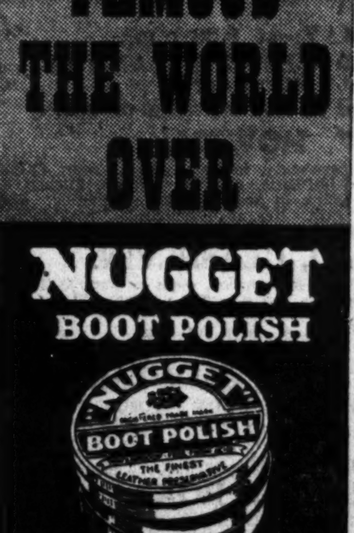

The Minister is aware that very many persons cannot obtain cycle tyres or tubes unless they are prepared to purchase them at prices far in excess of the fixed prices. The Minister, accordingly, wishes it to be known that if any person who needs a cycle tyre or tube, and is offered them by a dealer or other person at a price in excess of the fixed price, will report the facts to the Department of Supplies, with such information as will enable the Department to prosecute the offender, the Department of Supplies will undertake to see that the person requiring the cycle cover or tube for his own immediate use will be provided with same at once, at the controlled price.

This offer by the Minister, which will remain open for a limited period only, is made in the interests of the ordinary citizen, to many of whom a bicycle is essential to his livelihood.

Used to wake up with a HEADACHE

"I USED to wake up in the mornings with a dull headache. A year ago, I started taking Kruschen Salts regularly. Today, I wake up fresh and lively and can do my day's work without any exertion. I can recommend Kruschen for anyone suffering from headaches and constipation, and for putting new life into you. I intend to continue with Kruschen for the rest of my life."—E. P.

Do you suffer as this man did? Those dull headaches can nearly always be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons—prevent them from forming again—and you'll never have to worry any more.

Kruschen Salts is Nature's recipe for maintaining internal cleanliness. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your inside is thus kept clear of those impurities which give you continual headaches and make you unfit for work or pleasure.

Start taking Kruschen today. Sold by chemists in 1/9 bottles.
